Opportunities with the CIA National Clandestine Service

March 12, 2009

Mindy Trittipo reports that Freeman students and alumni who missed last week's CIA National Clandestine Service information session can still apply for positions. Applicants were requested to include the name of the presenter and the date and location of the information session in the online application's Objective field. Students and alumni who missed the session can contact the CMC for that information. Trittipo notes that there are opportunities for both graduating students and alumni and freshman and sophomores. The NCS internship available to freshmen and sophomores is a paid internship in Washington D.C. According to last week's presenters, the work will be very interesting and that many interns are able to go right in to the NCS training program.

For more information about these opportunities, contact Mindy Trittipo.