VOA: Shipping LNG to Europe: Pros, Cons for US Gulf Coast

April 8, 2022

Eric Smith, professor of practice and associate director of the Tulane Energy Institute , was interviewed by VOA News for a story about the Biden administration's plan to increase U.S. production of liquified natural gas in order to supply the European Union.

> "Europe is a continent that has been dependent on Russian energy for quite some time," Smith told VOA. "So Biden's commitment to help supply the EU with LNG became a key component in convincing some European countries to announce sanctions against Moscow. That's why this increased production of LNG is so important.”
